Consumer Manufacturing

With the fast-paced changes in technology and in processes within the consumer products industry, knowing a client's business and processes has never been more important.

Frost Brown Todd's lawyers approach all clients individually and assess each business situation in order to achieve success.

Many of our lawyers came to the firm with successful backgrounds in the consumer products and manufacturing sector, enabling them to combine their real-world skills with a strong team of litigation and transactional lawyers. The result: A legal team that understands the business needs of clients and provides the legal strategies to ensure their success in the marketplace.

Our lawyers serve the consumer manufacturing industry by:

- Litigating disputes with suppliers, distributors and customers
- Reviewing contracts and supply and distribution agreements with suppliers, distributors and customers
- Providing labor litigation
- Providing intellectual property and trademark litigation
- Providing trademark and labeling consultation
- Providing health care/HIPAA consultation
- Consulting and litigating environmental disputes at manufacturing facilities
- Providing real estate consultation and litigation for manufacturing and retail locations
- Providing bankruptcy consultation for suppliers and customers
- Providing executive compensation agreement review/negotiation
- Assisting in corporate compliance and acquisitions

Industrial Manufacturing

Markets. Shortages. Politics. Environmental regulations. World events. These and countless other issues affect manufacturers every day, shaping the way they do business and shaping the way they move the global economy.
